The people of Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy

To tell the story of the book, it is best to tell the story of some of the people behind it. A human from the planet Earth was one of them, though as our story opens he no more knows his destiny than a tea leaf knows the history of the East India Company.

'None at all' is exactly how much suspicion the ape descendant Arthur Dent had that one of his closest friends was not descended from an ape, but was in fact from a small planet somewhere in the vicinity of Betelgeuse.

The babel fish is such a bizarrely improbable coincidence that anything so mindbogglingly useful could evolve purely by chance that some thinkers have chosen to see it as a final clinching proof of the non-existence of God.

I don't go around gratuitously shooting people and then bragging about it in seedy space rangers' bars. I go around gratuitously shooting people and then agonise about it afterwards to my girlfriend.

Oh freddled gruntbuggly,
 Thy micturations are to me,
 As plurdled gabbleblotchits, in midsummer morning
 On a lurgid bee,

That mordiously hath blurted out,

Its earted jurtles, grumbling

Into a rancid festering confectious organ squealer.

Now the jurpling slayjid agrocrustles,

Are slurping hagrilly up the axlegrurts,

And living glupules frart and stipulate,

Like jowling meated
liverslime,

Groop, I implore thee, my footing turlingdromes,

And hooptiously drangle
 me,

With crinkly bindlewurdles, mashurbitries.

Or else I shall rend thee in the gobberwarts with my blurglecruncheon,

See if I don't!

The protruding upper halves of the letters now appear, in the local language, to read 'Go stick your head in a pig' and are no longer illuminated except at times of special celebration.

At these times of special celebration a choir of over two million robots sing the company song 'Share and Enjoy'.
